Pollution: An Urgent Call to Action

Pollution means making the environment dirty and harmful for living beings. It happens when unwanted and harmful substances like smoke, garbage, plastic, or chemicals are added to the air, water, or land. Pollution has many sources. Smoke from vehicles and factories causes air pollution. Throwing waste and chemicals into rivers causes water pollution. Using too much plastic and dumping garbage on land leads to land pollution. Loud sounds from traffic, machines, and loudspeakers cause noise pollution. Pollution harms not only the environment but also the health of people, animals, and plants. It can cause breathing problems, diseases, and damage natural resources. To reduce pollution, we must keep our surroundings clean, avoid using plastic, recycle waste, and plant more trees. Using public transport, saving water and electricity, and spreading awareness are also helpful. Everyone, including children and adults, should work together to stop pollution and protect our planet for a better future.

Causes of Pollution:

Pollution is caused by many human activities. One big cause is the smoke from cars, buses, and factories, which pollutes the air. Throwing garbage into rivers and using harmful chemicals in farming pollutes the water. Cutting down trees and burning plastic or waste also add to pollution. Using too much plastic and not recycling it harms the land. Loud sounds from traffic and machines cause noise pollution. All these actions damage nature and make the environment unsafe for people, animals, and plants.
